

SEEK MAID HERE FOR GEM THEFT

The world-wide hunt for the thief who stole the $250,000 worth of jewels from Mrs. Madeline Drummond, of the steamship America, today narrowed and the efforts of the scores of detectives engaged in the case are directed toward a maid employed by a prominent family in this city. The family, with the maid, were passengers aboard the America with Mrs. Drummond. It is the belief of the detective working on the case that this girl stole the jewels and hid them on the America. They believe that they have never been taken from the ship.

Work on this basis several of them are working in the hope of securing the maid in the hope of getting to a clue that will positively identify the suspect.

It is believed that the jewels must be located before the arrest of the maid under suspicion can be made. Local police officials have been instructed to keep her under surveillance.

Mrs. Drummond insisted to-day that unless a clue was found in a day or two she would offer a reward equal to the intrinsic value of the gems, with an addition for the sentimental value.

Three men and two women were arrested at a club in the Ritz-Carlton Winter garden, in the American Sunday night, when Mrs. Drummond was her guest. One of the men was her chauffeur, who was being escorted into and out of the car. The chauffeur was being escorted into and out of the car. The chauffeur was being escorted into and out of the car.

Having learned with friends of London the past week, diamond brooches and other jewelry that were stolen from her sister-in-law, the Hon. Mrs. Drummond, on Saturday night, Mrs. Drummond will not use as jewelry her treasure and not recovered.

The sister of the three-strapped pearl necklace pinned to the lady by Mrs. Drummond, was, unfortunately, for some time, in the American Sunday night, when Mrs. Drummond was her guest. One of the men was her chauffeur, who was being escorted into and out of the car. The chauffeur was being escorted into and out of the car.

MISS LONGYEAR, WHO IS TO MARRY NAVAL ENGINEER

MISS HELEN M. LONGYEAR

MISS LONGYEAR TOWED ENGINEER

The engagement of Miss Helen M. Longyear of Brookline to Carroll Paul, civil engineer in the United States Navy has been announced in New York by Mrs. J. M. Longyear, according to dispatches from that city to-day.

Miss Longyear graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology two years ago with high honors in the electrical course. She had been at the institute for three years.

Her father, John M. Longyear, formerly of Massachusetts, who for the past few years has made his home in Brookline, is one of the wealthiest residents of that city.

Carroll Paul is an assistant engineer, while rank of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy, stationed at the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

HARVARD DENIES THEFT OF CATS

Harvard Medical School denies that its dissecting tables are responsible for the loss of so many pet cats from Back Bay homes.

The cat scandal at Wellesley College, resulting in the conviction of a Wellesley student on a charge of larceny of a pet cat, has led to charges that Harvard Medical School, situated in the Back Bay Forest, is stealing pet cats and dissecting and even vivisectioning them.

Dr. W. C. Cannon, one of the "animal supply committee" of Harvard Medical, denies these charges. He says that cats used on the dissecting table there are etherized in the first place.

The Animal Rescue League kills its stray cats humanely and offers the bodies for dissection to any responsible institution.

It is considered strange by the league, however, that only one institution avails itself of this privilege. This is the physical laboratory at Lawrence Hall. Harvard Medical School does not go to the Animal Rescue League for its cat subjects. It gets them from a man who brings live cats to the school.

Use Only "Rounders."
Dr. Cannon of Harvard Medical said today: "Our school uses only a few hundred cats a year for dissecting purposes. It is not natural to suppose that all these cats which are missed from Back Bay homes are taken to the Animal Rescue League annually."

"The number we use is so insignificant, compared with the great number disposed of by the league, that our school cannot properly be charged with the diminution of Back Bay and its cat population."

Harvard Medical School's Animal Rescue League disposes annually of more than 20,000 stray cats, and from 1,000 to 3,000 dogs.

"We use more than all the colleges could possibly use. There is no question but what we have to acquire more to dissect, and the common sense of it is that the Animal Rescue League should furnish them."

"Our agent, whom I do not care to name, brings us stray cats. They are covered with a coating of coal dust. Almost always their ears are torn and their features marked by a campaign of all-or-none fighting. They are 'rounders,' and they look it."

"You kill the cats first and dissect them. In every case amputation is resorted to in the effort to drive the animal, that would be employed upon human beings, to the point of death."

"Dr. Cannon did not seem to be aware that the Animal Rescue League is ready to supply cats' bodies to accredited institutions. Huntington Smith, manager of the league, says:

"We sell about 25,000 cats annually. We are ready at all times to furnish these bodies to accredited medical and surgical laboratories. Only one institution avails itself of this privilege. That is the physical laboratory at Lawrence Hall. It does not charge. The bodies of cats with practically no organs are all needed dead ones from us. The only reason is that the animals which have been dead twenty-four hours, and that the college staff convey them away in suitable boxes."

"Where animals privately owned are killed upon request of the owner, their bodies, of course, do not go out."

NORTH END ITALIANS HOLD MARDI GRAS

(Clanking glasses, the strident of mandolin and guitar, the ringing of Neapolitan songs and the gay and picturesque dressing of pretty Italian girls and their escorts told of the carnival of the Mardi Gras in the North End. Many and their revels heard everywhere, and when the carnival was over, the revelers were all still in the quiet until Easter morning, when the celebration will burst forth again.

Business Success Through Publicity

Advertising Attracts the Brightest Minds

Often the creation of a new article or a new method of distributing an old article springs from a man who has but slight, if any, connection with the line of industry that uses the idea or the product.

There is in an Eastern city a landscape architect who has studied the profession under the best instruction abroad as well as on this side. His mind is particularly impressionable to the beautiful and he has a remarkable ability for grasping the most beautiful natural features. Not only is he consulted about landscape work, but he is often engaged in creating some of the best landscape work in the country.

He took a city back yard and converted it into a bower, then proceeded to show how and where to place their trees, plants and flowers, and their real beauty.

But, in addition to his work as a landscape architect, his mind is constantly delving into things outside of his profession. He has invented a pipe which has certain distinct advantages, and next he worked out a remarkable chair, which enables a man to rest his trousers, hang up his boots, and even hold his hat.

A big real estate promotion came under his direction and he developed it along lines of artistic effect and business. He has written books which are authorities in their field.

Advertising is simply a new way of selling. It is the modern method of locating and reaching the masses of people, and the greatest force in the world. If you have any article or service to offer, the newspaper is the great ally of all salesmen, for it will not only help your salesmen to sell goods to the trade, but it will help you to sell goods to the consumer.

Mystery of the Orient Transplanted to America :: By Dr. C. W. Doyle

"I see yet a slingshot," he said, and ultimately he was, indeed, a gentleman who had insisted on paying away nearly all he possessed in a matter in which he had taken part and also been involved, although he knew he had been egregiously deceived.

In the midst of his pleasant meditations the door of the room opened, and Quong Lang came in.

"Come," the young brother said to him, "let me bring Lee Yee's hand: come! the evening moon awaits us. Thy bath is ready, and a forest of tea leaves has been laid the Great Darkness. But I have washed and the pearl in my mouth—now I am ready. I have washed and I think these for thee, Quong Lang."

"By using them, my excellent young friend."

or sixty years ago. Yet the last two decades have shown that upon the microbes—which infect the atmosphere and everything we eat, feel, breathe, smell or drink—depends very largely the future of the world and of every individual in it.

No other newspaper has so many striking features of especial interest to women as does the Sunday AMERICAN. It is a splendidly illustrated news magazine for the whole family.
